ABSTRACT

This directory offers institutional and student data collected from proprietary schools certified to operate under sections 173.600-173.619 of the Missouri state statutes. The data covers 85 Missouri-based private career schools and 18 out-of-state regionally accredited degree-granting institutions: data tables present calendar year 1998 information; graphic displays offer highlights of changes in this sector over five years. Data tables and graphics are organized in six sections: Missouri Private Career Schools, 1998; Out-of-State Degree Granting Institutions, 1998; Inventory: Instructional Programs, 1998; Student Preparation, 1998; Participation, 1998; Completion and Employment, 1998; and Resources, 1998. The report notes that in 1998 Missouri private career schools enrolled 49,303 students in 840 instructional programs. The largest student enrollment was in business programs; precision technology programs have the second largest student enrollment. The report also notes that students attending private career schools generally have better educational foundations than they did five years ago; 38 percent report they are pursuing a degree. Data also indicate that private career schools continue to have a high level of success of graduates finding employment in their fields of study. A directory of schools and the 1990 Classification of Instructional Programs is appended. (CH)

INTRODUCTION

Extensive institutional and student data are collected from schools certified to operate under the provisions of sections 173.600 through 173.619 of the Missouri statutes. These data are processed and maintained as a planning and decision making resource for the schools submitting the data and for the Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education. They permit observation of the characteristics, scope and economic impact of the proprietary sector and the identification of trends over a period of time.

This "...Statistical Summary..." is the tenth publication derived from those data collection efforts. It is a compilation of the data collected for schools certified during calendar year 1998 and a graphic display highlighting changes in this sector over a five-year period. It is important to note that the proprietary sector is somewhat more heterogeneous and fluid than other sectors of postsecondary education, and its configuration is in a continual process of evolution and change. Keeping that in mind while reviewing the data as presented, it should be understood that the data present a snapshot of the activity at these schools for the 1998 calendar year.

Data for 85 Missouri-based private career schools and 18 out-of-state regionally accredited degree granting institutions are reported in the statistical summary portion of this report. While data are displayed by individual schools, the observations made in this narrative and in the graphical displays are based on aggregated information and analyses.

It should be noted that some of the tables and graphs contained in the report do not include enrollment information for correspondence schools. This is a result of the limited nature of data collection activities considered feasible for this type of school. Current goals of the certification program include enhancement of the student-oriented data collected from correspondence schools. This will allow broader inclusion of these schools in future reports.

During 1998, Missouri private career schools enrolled 49,303 students in 840 instructional programs of a widely varied nature. This enrollment figure includes students enrolled in on-campus programs as well as those receiving their education by correspondence. As the graphical section indicates, the largest student enrollment remains in business programs. Precision technology programs have shown a remarkable increase in enrollment and share of total enrollment and have become the second largest student enrollment area. This area includes programs related to computer science, engineering technology and precision production.

The changing workplace is bringing students into private career schools with different needs and goals. For example, students attending private career schools generally have a better educational foundation than five years ago as evidenced by the low percentage that are enrolling without a general educational development (GED) or high school diploma. Because a degree often provides greater opportunities for advancement and earning potential, private career school students also have shown a strong interest in degree programs. Of the total number of students enrolled in Missouri private career school (excluding correspondence programs), 38 percent report they are pursuing a degree. At accredited institutions, where nearly all of the degree programs currently are offered, more than one student in two graduated from an associate or baccalaureate degree program in 1998. In 1994, the proportion was less than one in four.

The data also indicate that private career schools are continuing a high level of performance in the area of success of graduates finding employment in their fields of study. The employment rate for graduates remained at 75 percent for the second consecutive year. This is another obvious indication that this sector is strongly attuned to the needs of business and industry.

The Missouri private career schools included in this report graduated 12,524 students into the employment market, expended $96 million into the state's economy, and employed 2,016 persons with a payroll of almost $40 million. In addition, they awarded over $80 million in student financial aid. Clearly, the private career school sector is a sizeable segment of postsecondary education in Missouri which continues to command public interest.

The integrity of this directory and statistical summary is sensitive to the accuracy of the data submitted by individual schools and to the processes of recording and displaying those data by the Department of Higher Education. The utmost care has been exerted to maximize its integrity; however, total attainment of that goal is still being pursued. Inquiries regarding the contents of this publication should be directed to Leroy Wade, Director, Proprietary School Certification Program, Department of Higher Education, 3515 Amazonas Drive, Jefferson City, Missouri 65109-5717; (573) 751-2361.
